Recorded leads reflect what the account was able to attribute. Our review found attribution issues affecting the later months, and those are being corrected as part of the restart plan. Lead counts from April onward understate the real volume, and the cost per lead for those months reads higher than the true figure as a result.

MEASURING RETURN, AND WHERE THINGS STAND

- What the ad platform reports. Spend, reach, clicks, cost per click, and the leads it was able to record.
- What it does not report. Which of those leads turned into booked jobs, and what those jobs were worth. That sits in ServiceTitan.
- To answer the return question properly we need a revenue by source export from ServiceTitan to line up against this spend.
- PPC is paused. Nothing has run since July 17 and nothing is scheduled.
- Attribution work is underway. We are rebuilding conversion measurement, including the ServiceTitan booked job connection, so future results are provable rather than estimated.
- The next step is yours. That export is the missing half of the calculation and the one piece we cannot pull ourselves.
